

MAY DAY, 1992

SR/CL: LEITMOTIV: "here, upon this bank and shoal of time..." --W.S., Macbeth

"Gauss was intensely private, but his wife kept telling him that they needed company, so he finally invited the professor in the next office to come for supper. Gauss seemed to find the supper conversation tolerable but afterwards, when the guest had consumed one brandy and started on his second, he launched into a rambling soliloquy as to how he no longer read the Bible or the Catechism, as it was possible to lead a happy life within the limits of this world. Gauss immediately became bored and after telling his wife to remove the decanter, said: 'You should think more and drink less. If there is no immortality, then there is no meaning.'"

The 462nd Anniversary of the Confessio Augustana will be celebrated in the Hotel California on JD 2448799.5 in congruence with The Agenda of 5/72. The Pigs will provide both the banquet and the entertainment, as procured by The Little Orphan Children, sliced by The Midget Tag Team and fried by The Asylum Choir. "The hawk and the buzzard were neighbors but the hawk thought the buzzard was lazy. The hawk was never still, circling and diving, while the buzzard flapped his wings about once an hour and the rest of the time just floated on the air currents. One day as he flew past the floating buzzard the hawk said, 'Buzzard, I'm working as hard as I can, but what are you doing?' The buzzard said 'Waiting' on the will of God. The hawk started to tell him that he'd better come up with a new plan, when he spied a mouse sitting on top of a metal fence post. The hawk executed his famous power dive, but six inches above his prey, the mouse jumped. The hawk was impaled on the metal post and killed graveyard dead. Then the buzzard ate the hawk."  1) "If you wish wisdom, borrow from sorrow".
